Museum Montreal 2022 :

McCord Musem

The beloved mid-size McCord Museum is a social history museum near McGill University that celebrates life in Montreal, both past and present. Its 1.5 million artifacts are organized into categories, including fashion and textiles, photography, decorative arts, and more. The McCord hosts several temporary interactive installations and exhibitions each year. Many of them have wide appeal and are hugely popular, such as the recent North American premiere of the Victoria and Albert Museum's "Balenciaga: Master of Couture" exhibition.

Montreal Museum of Fine Arts

Founded in 1860, the MMFA is one of the 10 most-visited museums in North America. It's a grand and comprehensive institution, on the historic Golden Square Mile stretch of Sherbrooke Street, with a heritage collection of some 43,000 works, many of them displayed throughout the museum's five pavilions. The outstanding permanent collection includes international art, antiquities from around the world, decorative arts and design, and Quebec and Canadian art—that means you'll find everything from Ancient Egyptian sarcophagi to works by Rembrandt. The museum's five connected pavilions may feel sprawling at first, but it's pretty easy to get around once you start, and tours are offered daily in French and English.

Pointe-à-Callière - Museum of Archaeology and History

Pointe-à-Callière, in Old Montreal, is the largest and most frequently visited history museum in Montreal, and the largest archaeology museum in Canada. Even its location is significant: It's built on the site where Montreal was founded in 1642. In addition to the permanent exhibitions, Pointe-à-Callière also presents three to four temporary exhibitions a year, including on topics far from Montreal, like Easter Island and the Royal Queens of Ancient Egypt.

Musée d'art contemporain de Montréal

Founded in 1964, the Musée d'art contemporain de Montréal (MACM)—also known as "the MAC" or "le MAC" by locals—anchors the massive Place des Arts cultural complex downtown. The MAC presents temporary exhibitions devoted to current artists from Canada and abroad, as well as exhibitions drawn from the museum’s permanent collection of some 8,000 pieces: digital, sound, and video works, installations, paintings, sculptures, photographs, and paper artifacts.

There are also artistic performances and special events, including Nocturne evenings, late-night fêtes featuring DJs and drinks. Although it's popular with the obvious crowd—lovers of contemporary art—the MAC works hard to expand its audience. A recent Leonard Cohen exhibition, which paid tribute to the musician and Montreal native, was a blockbuster that drew art-lovers from around the world, including U2 frontman Bono.

Montreal Science Centre

The Montreal Science Centre is a large and family-friendly museum located in the Old Port—there's really no better place in town to explore how science and technology shape our lives. The museum features temporary and permanent interactive exhibitions on science and technology. Plan to spend more than an hour wandering around, especially if you've got curious kids in town; a nine-vendor food court makes mealtime a breeze, too.
